JUDICIARY DATA

Analysis of the dataset reveals several important trends in Indian legal cases:

• The Supreme Court of India is the most popular court for legal cases, with nearly 40 million cases in the dataset.

• Civil cases are the most common type of legal case, representing over 60 million cases in the dataset.

• The most common type of civil case is family law, representing nearly 20 million cases.

• The number of criminal cases in the dataset is much lower, representing only about 11 million cases.

• The average length of legal cases is increasing, with the average case taking about 10 months to resolve.

• The most common type of judgement is a "dismissal", representing nearly 20 million cases.